In the Epilepsy clinic of the Institute of Neurology, Madras Medical College, where all the cases are registered, research has been undertaken in various aspects of Epilepsy. Work also has been done on the surgical and biochemical aspects of Epilepsy. In addition to this, an intenstive study of 1,200 cases of Epilepsy is being undertaken as a Collaborative Research Scheme with the aid of P.L. 480 funds through the Indian Council of Medical Research. Madras is one of the five centres in the country conducting this intensive study on epilepsy. Various biochemical aspects resulting from prolonged medication are also studied in the Neuro-Chemistry department attached to the Institute of Neurology. Epileptic cases, which are not properly controlled in spite of prolonged and various combination of drugs are analysed, assessed for surgical treatment in an effort to control their fits. Such surgical operations are performed in more than one site in the brain.
